

LTA: First video lectures on YouTube - Are you a professional real-time subtitler? Then you could help us by answering a short questionnaire.

Dear LTA stakeholders,

We hope this email finds you well.

Our project is coming to an end. This year, we will publish our training materials on YouTube and our webpage. We have started by publishing some videos on YouTube. By June, all materials, including PowerPoint presentations, Trainers' Guides, transcripts, tasks, and many more video lectures will be online.

If you want to watch some of the video lectures, please visit our YouTube channel.

Please leave us your feedback there. We will also be happy to answer your questions.

SUBTI-Access would like to ask you for your support and invites you to participate in this online survey about Output Tools in real-time subtitling. Are you a professional real-time subtitler? Please share with us your knowledge:

Lastly, LTA will be presented at two annual highlights in the Terminology and Software Engineering Communities:

1. To spread the word about new job roles for language professionals, ECQA together with SDI, will present LTA at the International Terminology Summer School (www.termnet.eu/tss2021) from 1-4 July 2021, Online.
Subtitling is booming, universities are aware of it, and the terminology community needs to be aware of the challenges Intralingual Real-Time Subtitlers, Respeakers and Velotypists face when doing their important work.
2. At EuroSPI 2021 (https://2021.eurospi.net/), software developers and software process assessors gather to discuss the latest developments. ECQA initiated a full-day workshop about Accessibility, Team Skills and Diversity. This year, LTA will be presented by UAB and ECQA, to showcase what Digital Accessibility means in practice, and what the software industry needs to consider when improving their processes and tools.
